

In June, Dan Seder attended the Investment Advisor Association's (IAA) annual Lobbying Day in Washington, D.C. as a representative of Blue Chip Partners and the overall investment advisory community. Dan was able to share his perspectives on the industry and also help advocate for investment advisors and their clients alike. There has been a lot of discussion and recent regulatory activity related to the fiduciary standards, specific rules of engagement that require advisors to act in the best interest of their clients at all times – a standard we have and will continue to embrace. Dan also had the opportunity to meet with Michigan Representative Bill Huizenga to share these same perspectives on the industry and its regulatory environment, a photo of which is captured here as part of the IAA's July newsletter.
